FLY on the wall

Some Fly-lights and lowlights of 2006

Gov.-elect Eliot Spitzer offered some eloquent words about the "family" of New York state.

WELL SAID #1

Eliot Spitzer's run for governor had turned to a victory trot by the time he keynoted the Employer Recognition Breakfast of Westchester Arc, held April 21 at the Marriott Westchester hotel in Greenburgh (Tarrytown address). So the front-runner could afford to look beyond the issues to speak eloquently about the "family" of New York state:

"It is often said that New York is a family. Those with disabilities are members of this family, and it is our obligation as a state to offer them the same opportunity, independence and empowerment that we aspire to for all members of our family" (Fly, May 1).
